

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION

5.1 Conclusion

The researcher want to concluded all the findings in order to answered the formulation from the research questions that stated in the previous chapter. There are three research question, the first is what cognitive process does the students follow in reading English text, and the second is how is the cognitive process realized by the students in reading English text and the last from the research question is why is the cognitive process realized by the students in reading English text in the way it is. From the research process there are several findings when the researcher doing the research. The researcher showed there are six findings in the students' cognitive process in reading English text, namely: (1) Seeing the title, (2) Reading the text, (3) Understanding the text, (4) Translating, (5) Writing the main point, (6) Concluding. From this findings the researcher took a conclude that the first things that students did in the cognitive process in reading is seeing the first thing what they see after that start reading the text and then trying to understanding the text, after they understanding and if they had a problem they tried to translate it into Bahasa and also they picked up the important things in the text and then they remember about what is the text about and the last is they conclude what is the English text about.

5.2 Suggestion

Based on the passage above and the researcher conducted the aim of this research about to know the students' cognitive process in reading English text, and the researcher hopes that this research can be useful and participate to the teachers in order to knowing students' cognitive process when the teachers doing the learning and before start the learning process and also the researcher hopes that this research can be useful for the next researcher and the important thing is to got the whole knowledge from this research for the teachers towards students and also the readers.